World Migration 2008: Managing Labour Mobility in the Evolving Global Economy

2008/Softcover
300 pages
ISBN 978-92-9068-405-3
ISSN 1561-5502
English, Français, Español
US$ 80.00

World Migration 2008 focuses on the labour mobility of people in today's evolving global economy. It provides policy findings and practical options with a view to making labour migration more effective and equitable and to maximizing the benefits of labour migration for all stakeholders concerned.

The findings and options are drawn from IOM's policy and programme experience, the most recent works of leading scholars and researchers, partner international organizations, government migration policy and practice, the private sector, and civil society. The report also analyses migration flows, stocks and trends and surveys current migration developments in the major regions of the world.

Developer's Toolkit

2007/Softcover
ISBN 978-92-9068-407-7
English

Identity and travel document management, including the use of biometrics, is an increasingly important and complex migration issue for IOM Member States, with implications for the facilitation of normal movement, security and overall governance. Developed with a number of influential international experts, this Developer's Toolkit aims to provide a good overview of all topics related to the development and implementation of a new security document as well as to offer some inspirations in setting up the project. The book is not a do-it-yourself step-by-step manual, but represents a reference, where the developer of a security document can find tools and ideas to fine-tune their project and the product concerned. The publication gathers a large number of the relevant aspects in separate chapters, and provides a quality insight of the subject, providing both a managerial and a technical perspective on security documents.

Migration and Development: Perspectives from the South

2007/Softcover
English

The relationship between migration and development is a key topic for research and policy. Earlier pessimistic perspectives focused on the threat to development of poorer countries through the loss of human resources. Recently, a more optimistic view has been advanced by northern governments and international agencies. This is based on the idea that remittance flows and transfers of know-how by migrants can actually reinvigorate development. But what do people in the South think about international migration? How do the migrants themselves experience international migration, and how do they understand development? These questions are rarely asked.

This book attempts to redress the balance by initiating a South-South dialogue. It is the result of discussions among researchers, government officials and migrant activists from five major emigration countries: India, Mexico, Morocco, the Philippines and Turkey. The five country case studies present experiences of emigration over the past 50 years and analyse the consequences for economy, society and politics.

The book is edited by Stephen Castles (University of Oxford, UK) and Raúl Delgado Wise (University of Zacatecas, Mexico). Other authors include: Alejandro Portes, Jørgen Carling, Manolo Abella, Jeffrey Ducanes, Binod Khadria, Humberto Márquez Covarrubias, Hein de Haas, Maruja M.B. Asis, Gamze Avci, Kemal Kirisci and Oliver Bakewell.

Living Across Worlds: Diaspora, Development and Transnational Engagement

2007/Softcover
211 pages
ISBN 978-92-9068-404-6
English

The research presented in this volume is based on case studies from around the world to examine how migration influences development. The studies reveal that it is seldom the simple act of migrating, but rather the conditions under which migration takes place that determine the developmental impact of migration. Rather than dwelling on normative discussions about whether migration should contribute to development, whether remittances should be put to more developmental uses, whether return should be promoted or whether development cooperation should engage in collaborative efforts with migrant and refugee diasporas, the chapters focus on the questions policymakers and practitioners should consider when making background analyses for such decisions.

Migration, Development and Poverty Reduction

2007/Softcover
74 pages
ISBN 978-92-9068-368-1
English, Français

IOM and the African Capacity-building Foundation (ACBF) organized a workshop in Dakar on Migration, Development and Poverty Reduction, attended by representatives of over 20 countries. The discussions centred on the potential contribution of migrants to development and various ways to strengthen their impact. The discussions resulted in a series of proposals for the High-level Dialogue, held at UN Headquarters in New York, in September 2006.

Passport Examination Procedure Manual

2007/Hardcover
150 pages
English, Français
Available from IOM Manila

The Passport Examination Procedure Manual has been designed for use by border control officials and related agencies involved in the migration management process to examine travel documents. It is a reference tool presenting illustrated advice on travel document inspection, following the individual steps of the FALSE DOC procedure – a process that enables the inspection of travel documents by focusing on the following key inspection elements: face, altered data, lamina, stitching, edges, document number, overseas travel and consistency. At every step of the FALSE DOC procedure, the manual anticipates questions and provides answers and advice that assist operational personnel to identify fraudulent documents.

Out of Sight, Out of Mind? Child Domestic Workers and Patterns of Trafficking in Cambodia

2007/Softcover
78 pages
ISBN 978-92-9068-240-X
English
Available from IOM Phnom Penh

This study was conducted in three provinces in Cambodia – Koh Kong, Kampong Som and Siem Reap. The research investigates the process and mechanisms of trafficking within Cambodia for two target groups: commercially sexually exploited women and girls (CSEWGs) and child domestic workers (CDWs). The objective of the research was to understand how the pull factors in different provinces lead to migration and trafficking. It also sought to clarify how the process of migration could itself lead to trafficking.

Compendium of International Migration Law Instruments

2007/Softcover
878 pages
ISBN 978-90-6704-249-9
English
US$ 85.00
Published by Asser Press
Distributed for T.M.C. Asser Press
by Cambridge University Press

This publication guides readers through the various international norms and principles governing international migration. To that end, the Compendium compiles international instruments of varying legal force – from international treaties and customary international law, to principles and guidelines which, although they may be non-binding, are nonetheless of relevance and can contribute to the progressive development of law in areas not yet governed by positive law.

International Migration Law: Developing Paradigms and Key Challenges

2007/Softcover
530 pages
ISBN 978-90-6704-232-1
English
US$ 120.00

Published by Asser Press
Distributed for T.M.C. Asser Press
by Cambridge University Press

This book encapsulates international migration law by examining developments first addressed in the volume on Migration and International Legal Norms (edited by T.A. Aleinikoff and V. Chetail; T.M.C. Asser Press 2003) and discussing new items. The book considers emerging issues such as the challenge posed by migration to State sovereignty, and the protection of human rights as a result of the increasing tensions between anti-terrorism or security legislation and immigration measures, the impact of the use of biometrics technology to identify and better monitor international movements of persons, and enhanced cooperation at European Union external border. The human rights of vulnerable groups of migrants are also examined. The issue of forced migration considers the international migration law relating to groups such as internally displaced persons, as well as the international community's response to secondary movements of asylum seekers. Questions of state responsibility concerning, for example, stranded migrants and the provision of consular protection and assistance to migrants are also discussed.

The IOM Handbook on Direct Assistance for Victims of Trafficking

2007/Softcover
356 pages
ISBN 978 92 9068 371 1
English, Albanian

IOM has some 13 years of experience in implementing counter-trafficking activities and has provided assistance to over 14,000 victims of trafficking in all regions of the world. With a growing number of organizations, especially local NGOs, now providing or intending to provide assistance to victims of trafficking, IOM would like to share its experience and lessons learned. This Handbook summarizes and systematizes this experience. Though it does not set out to provide a single methodology for the provision of assistance to victims of trafficking, it offers suggestions and guidance based on IOM's many years of experience. IOM hopes that it will be helpful to all organizations assisting victims, but especially for organizations that are beginning to develop victim assistance programmes and can benefit from IOM's experience. This Handbook provides guidance and advice necessary to effectively deliver a full range of assistance to victims of trafficking from the point of initial contact and screening to the effective social reintegration of the individuals concerned.

ASEAN and Trafficking in Persons: Using Data as a Tool to Combat Trafficking in Persons

2007/Softcover
164 pages
ISBN 978-92-9068-240-X
English
US$ 26.00

Available from IOM Jakarta

ASEAN member countries are always looking for ways to improve their response to trafficking in persons. However, these efforts are being held back by a lack of relevant, reliable data on trafficking. Recognizing this problem, in 2005 the ASEAN member countries commissioned IOM to conduct a pilot research project to identify best practice in data collection on trafficking, and to prepare a situation report on data collection by government agencies in four ASEAN member countries (Cambodia, Indonesia, the Philippines and Thailand).

This report presents the findings of that research and reflects the work of four national research teams based in Phnom Penh, Jakarta, Manila and Bangkok. It analyses information obtained through reviews of the existing literature, interviews with government officials and examination of government documents, such as intake forms and annual reports. The report would not have been possible without the assistance and cooperation of the four host governments – Cambodia, Indonesia, the Philippines and Thailand.

Migration Perspectives in Eastern Europe and Central Asia – 2006

2006/Softcover
152 pages
ISBN 978-92-9069-250-9
English, Russian
Available from IOM Vienna

IOM Technical Cooperation Centre, with the support of the US Department of State's Bureau for Population, Refugees and Migration (PRM), has recently published the report on Migration Perspectives in Eastern Europe and Central Asia. The report is an innovative collection of migration articles focusing on migration trends, future priorities and migration challenges in Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Georgia, Kazakhstan, the Kyrgyz Republic, Moldova, the Russian Federation, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Ukraine and Uzbekistan and should serve as a reference tool for the EECA governments, migration authorities, donors and scholars alike.

Migration Patterns Survey and HIV Vulnerability Assessment Mapping in Selected Districts of Timor-Leste

2006/Softcover
 97 pages
 ISBN 1 74067 461
 English

Timor-Leste, the world's newest democracy, has extremely poor health indicators and high levels of endemic poverty. Information about migration patterns, mobility and HIV prevalence and knowledge in the country are limited. This study seeks to identify migration patterns and HIV vulnerability in six districts of Timor-Leste.

HIV and People on the Move: Risk and Vulnerabilities of Migrants and Mobile Populations in Southern Africa

2006/Softcover
56 pages
English
Available from IOM Pretoria

This is a summary report of the structured discussion on the links between population mobility, migration and HIV in Southern Africa, which was organized by the IOM in collaboration with the Health and Development Networks (HDN). The discussion took place on the AF-AIDS eForum, the regional eForum on HIV in Africa, from April to August 2005. The discussion focused on three main topics: (1) How does migration and population mobility lead to increased HIV vulnerability in Southern Africa; (2) How does HIV affect migration and population mobility patterns; and (3) The brain drain of healthcare professionals from Southern Africa.

Breaking the Cycle of Vulnerability: Responding to the Health Needs of Trafficked Women in East and Southern Africa

2006/Softcover
64 pages
English
Available from IOM Pretoria

This report documents three trafficking trends in the region, and looks at the health risks that trafficked women encounter in each one. In all three trends women are vulnerable to sexual, reproductive and mental health-related problems. At present, organizations that aim to counter human trafficking in East and Southern Africa tend to focus on the prevention of trafficking, legislative change, and general victim assistance and return. This report investigates these issues and why the health of trafficked women should be integrated in the trafficking discourse in order to address the vulnerability of victims of trafficking to sexual, reproductive and mental health-related problems.

Return Migration in Austria

2006/Softcover
114 pages
English
Available from IOM Vienna

Return Migration in Austria is the contribution of the National Contact Point (NCP) Austria to the third European Pilot Study on Return Migration in the EU Member States, which is compiled by the European Migration Network (EMN).

The study Return Migration in Austria deals on the one hand with voluntary return of persons, who make the free and informed decision to return to their home country, and on the other hand with the forced return of persons, who have to leave the country for different reasons.

After giving an overview on various definitions and concepts and statistics on return in Austria, the study sheds light on the political and legal framework, the return measures in Austria and bi- and multilateral cooperation in the field of return.

Migration for Development: Within and Beyond Frontiers

2006/Softcover
436 pages
ISBN 978-92-9068-310-X
English
US$ 30.00

This book presents the findings from selected studies published in IOM's Migration Research Series during 2005-2006. Migration for Development: Within and Beyond Frontiers has been published to coincide with the High-Level Dialogue on International Migration and Development (HLD) in September 2006. The High-Level Dialogue focused on the global effort to create measures that will maximize the potential development benefits of migration and mitigate its negative aspects. This collection was intended to be a contribution to that debate.

Migration and Religion in a Globalized World

2006/Softcover
73 pages
ISBN 978-92-9068-238-7
English, Français

The presentation of this report reflects the topics on the agenda of a conference with the same title organized jointly by the Ministry in-charge of the Moroccan Community Residing Abroad and IOM, which was held in Rabat, Morocco, in December 2005. The meeting explored the role of religion in the migration process to assist policymakers to better understand the dynamics involved and their interaction. The discussions focused on exploring the relationship between migration and religion, the role of religion in the migration process, younger generations and religious tolerance, the role of the media, and how religious communities may constitute a vital resource for migrants trying to adapt to a new community.

Final Report on the Ministerial Conference of the Least-Developed Countries on Enhancing the Development Impact of Remittances

2006/Softcover
412 pages
English, Français

In response to the growing importance of remittances and their development potential for LDCs, IOM, in collaboration with the Government of Benin and the United Nations Office of the High Representative for the Least-Developed Countries, Landlocked Developing Countries and Small Island Developing States (UN-OHRLLS) organized a two-day ministerial conference. The overall objective was to explore avenues to enhance and improve the development impact of remittances in LDCs. It also provided a platform for participants to share experiences and lessons learned, consult on issues faced by migrant remitters and propose practical solutions.

Handbook on Establishing Effective Labour Migration Policies in Countries of Origin and Destination

2006/Softcover
248 pages
ISBN 978-92-9068-296-7
English
US$ 25.00

The 13th OSCE Economic Forum, held in Prague, Czech Republic in May 2005, provided the impetus for the joint OSCE, IOM and ILO initiative to produce this Handbook. Its aim is to assist states in their efforts to develop new policy approaches, solutions, and practical measures for better management of labour migration in countries of origin and destination. It has been prepared primarily for decision-makers and practitioners in the OSCE area and countries served by IOM and ILO. It analyses effective policies and practices and draws upon examples from OSCE participating states and other countries that have considerable experience in this field.

Migrants' Remittances and Development: Myths, Rhetoric and Realities

2006/Softcover
118 pages
ISBN 978-92-9068-294-3
English
US$ 26.00

The close relationship between economic development and migration has been recognized for some time. In recent years, however, there has been a shift in thinking about the relationship between migration and development. One of the factors which contributed to this change in thinking is the growing recognition of the importance of remittances. Given the importance of this topic, IOM has co-sponsored the publication of this study by Bimal Ghosh with The Hague Process on Refugees and Migration.

Humanitarian and Social Programmes: Final Report on Assistance to Needy, Elderly Survivors of Nazi Persecution

2006/Softcover
206 pages
ISBN 978-92-9068-292-9
English

In four years, IOM's Humanitarian and Social Programmes reached over 73,800 victims of Nazi persecution, most of whom lived in isolation and extreme poverty in Central and Eastern Europe. IOM delivered assistance worth over US$ 32 million to 17 countries. For many survivors the assistance received represented the first recognition of their suffering in nearly 60 years. While HSP may have brought long-awaited recognition, it also exposed a variety of survivor and community needs, many of which are likely to remain unaddressed for years to come.

Migration and Development Conference: Final Report

2006/Softcover
287 pages
English
Available from IOM Brussels

This report gives a comprehensive account of the key messages articulated at the Conference on Migration and Development in Brussels. Jointly organized by the three Belgian Ministries of Development Cooperation, Foreign Affairs and Interior in cooperation with IOM, and with the support of the European Commission and the World Bank, this conference brought together participants from countries of origin, transit and destination, international organizations, research institutes, NGOs and diaspora organizations to exchange best practices and policy approaches on migration and development.

The conference proceedings addressed five main themes; (1) migration and the millennium development goals: facts and myths, (2) migration policies and development: how to achieve greater coherence of migration and development policies, (3) partnership among countries of origin, transit and destination, including two case studies for Mali, Morocco, Belgium and South Asia-Europe/North America, (4) migrant communities and development and (5) promoting migrants contribution to the development of their home country.

Resource Book for Law Enforcement Officers on Good Practices in Combating Child Trafficking

2006/Softcover
218 pages
English
Available from IOM Vienna

The Resource Book presents current good practices and recommendations, recognized by an international team of experts having extensive knowledge on the topic. The publication further includes innovative techniques and practical information based on inputs from national and international experts from law enforcement, medical science and civil society.

Having briefly introduced the legal background on the area of combating child trafficking, the Resource Book elaborates good practices on: age assessment/identification of the child; investigative methods; interviewing techniques; and cooperation between law enforcement authorities and NGOs/social service providers.

The Resource Book is the result of the project "Comprehensive Training for Law Enforcement Authorities Responsible for Trafficking in Children/Minors" implemented by the International Organization for Migration (IOM) in Vienna on behalf of the Austrian Federal Ministry of the Interior and supported by the 2005 AGIS Programme of the European Union-Directorate General Justice Freedom and Security.

Dimensiones de la trata de personas en Colombia

2006/Tapa blanda
52 paginas
ISBN 958-33-8885-8
Español
Available from IOM Bogotá

El libro Dimensiones de la Trata de Personas en Colombia es un primer esfuerzo conjunto de tres instituciones - el Programa de Prevención, Reintegración y Asistencia para las Víctimas de la Trata de Personas en Colombia de la OIM; el área contra la Trata de Personas del DAS/INTERPOL; y el Grupo Humanitas de la Policía Nacional - por abordar el tema de la sistematización y cuantificación de la trata de personas en Colombia. De este modo, se espera avanzar en la unificación de metodologías que permitan analizar la información sobre este delito, cuya cuantificación hasta la fecha ha sido difícil, aunque existen esfuerzos relevantes. Es importante mencionar que más allá de establecer cifras sobre los casos de trata registrados e investigados por cada entidad, este documento describe algunos dilemas y problemas que se plantean al sistematizar la información referente al tema.

ISSN 978 92 9068 249 3

Available from IOM Washington

The information obtained during this research, while not allowing any overall estimates on the magnitude of the problem, referred to numerous concrete cases of both human trafficking and exploitation of persons working in degrading and inhuman conditions in all participating countries which included The Bahamas, Barbados, Guyana, Jamaica, the Netherlands Antilles, St. Lucia, and Suriname.

Victims of human trafficking in the Caribbean region were found to be men, women, boys, and girls from the Caribbean as well as extra-regional countries. These victims were found in multiple forms of exploitation including sexual exploitation, forced labour, and domestic servitude.

This research was primarily a qualitative exercise and was not intended to supply statistics as to the numbers of trafficking victims within each country, but rather to provide a starting point for the participating countries to examine the problem of human trafficking within their local context and to encourage dialogue about how to combat this crime within the Caribbean region.

This review examined existing criminal provisions that constitute one or more elements of the trafficking process such as procurement, forced detention, prostitution, sexual offences, kidnapping, abduction and other offences against the person, which can then be used in combination as a "patchwork" replacement for a trafficking law. Employment law is detailed to ascertain the rights of workers, and the capacity to penalize employers for exploitative activities. Immigration laws have been assessed in order to see whether immigration officers have any legislative basis for identifying and taking action against suspected trafficking activities, and offering protection to victims.

Though there are laws in all of these countries that could potentially be used to combat trafficking, there are a number of challenges that need to be addressed. Given that most of these countries are new to the issue of human trafficking, this review has looked at the need for the criminal justice system to reform and adapt to the particular needs and constraints of this phenomenon in terms of court procedures and interaction with potential victims.

Labour Migration in Asia: Protection of Migrant Workers, Support Services and Enhancing Development Benefits

2005/Softcover
358 pages
ISBN 92-978-9068-242-4
English
US$ 39.00

This is the second volume of Labour Migration in Asia. The first volume (2003) looked at trends, challenges and policy responses in countries of origin. This volume describes and makes an assessment of specific initiatives in selected countries of origin to (1) protect migrant workers through the regulation of recruitment and setting of minimum standards in employment contracts, (2) provide support services to migrant workers through pre-departure orientation and a welfare fund and (3) enhance the development benefits of labour migration through training, skills development and remittances.

The articles are written by labour migration specialists and practitioners from the countries concerned and have been commissioned by IOM, the Department for International Development (UK) and the Asian Development Bank.

Global Survey of Research on Human Trafficking

342 pages
ISBN 978-92-9068-240-X
English
US$ 35.00

The Global Survey of Research on Human Trafficking reviews current research on trafficking in each major region of the world. Over the last decade there has been a tremendous increase in research on trafficking in response to growing worldwide concern about the problem. The study provides a synthesis and analysis of the main types of research on trafficking in different parts of the world. The study includes papers from more than a dozen experts. These papers were first discussed at an international conference sponsored by the Italian government which was held in Rome in May 2004.

The volume is edited by Dr Frank Laczko, Head of Research, IOM Geneva, and Dr Elzbieta Godziak, Research Director, Institute for the Study of International Migration, Washington.

Essentials of Migration Management is a learning tool, written in a non-technical manner, which provides an overview of the key elements of international migration management. It is intended to provide an accurate, interactive framework of reference and instruction on contemporary migration dynamics, policies and trends. It aims to expand the knowledge and facilitate the work of government policymakers, practitioners, academics, organizations as well as IOM staff members. The three-volume course manual is a stand-alone tool for independent study.

The Essentials of Migration Management consists of 32 individual migration-related sections. Each topical section of the course manual includes learning objectives, case studies, a guide to applying the subject matter to specific situations, and a list of relevant resource materials.

Migration, Development and Poverty Reduction in Asia

2005/Softcover
274 pages
ISBN 978-92-9068-248-6
English
US$ 35.00

Earlier versions of the papers in this volume were presented at the Regional Conference on Migration and Development in Asia, held in Lanzhou, China in March 2005. The conference, hosted by China's Ministry of Foreign Affairs, was organized by IOM and funded by Britain's Department for International Development (DFID).

Though there has been increasing attention paid to the potential role migration can play in fostering development, most of that attention has tended to focus on international migration. Internal migration has been somewhat neglected but is also an extremely important policy area.

One of the key aims of the Lanzhou conference was to identify more effective ways to enhance the benefits of internal migration for poverty reduction and development, and how this could be complemented by strategies to ensure that migrants have decent working conditions and access to health and social services.

Fertile Fields: Trafficking in Persons in Central Asia

2005/Softcover

ISBN 978-92-9068-243-1
English
US$ 20.00
Available from IOM Vienna

Fertile Fields: Trafficking in Persons in Central Asia maps out the regional patterns of trafficking in persons in Central Asia, outlines the links to labour migration, presents data on trafficking victims assisted in Central Asia, determines gaps in existing data and develops recommendations on counter-trafficking responses.

The report has shown that, although Central Asia has not yet been recognized as a trafficking “hot spot”, there is evidence of significant irregular flows, both within the region and beyond, and that sexual and labour exploitation are rife in the region. Deceptive recruitment is the most common, with a high proportion taking place through commercialized, albeit illegal, travel and employment agencies. Border and taxation regimes and the availability of a wide range of transportation services further compound the problem.

This report was made possible through funding from the Government of Norway.

The Berne Initiative Process was launched by the Government of Switzerland in 2001. The International Agenda for Migration Management is a product of the Berne Initiative Process designed to assist government migration practitioners in developing effective measures for the management of migration. It offers a non-binding yet comprehensive reference system for dialogue, cooperation and capacity building at the national, regional and global level.

The International Agenda for Migration Management represents views of states throughout the world. Its main elements – common understandings and effective practices – have been developed in a process of consultations among states from all regions, fully respecting their sovereignty in the field, and with other stakeholders in migration.

Interstate Cooperation and Migration: Berne Initiative Studies

2005/Softcover
135 pages
ISBN 978-92-9068-241-7
English, Français, Español

There is a growing awareness that interstate cooperation is essential for effective migration management. Migration is closely interlinked with several other major policy issues such as trade, investment, human rights, the environment and can no longer be managed by states in isolation. While the need for a cooperative form of migration management is increasingly recognized, there is little knowledge of the objectives, the working and the effectiveness of various forms of interstate cooperation in the field of migration.

In 2004 IOM launched a policy research series on interstate cooperation on migration to address this gap in research. With the generous support of the Swiss Foundation of Population, Migration and Environment, IOM commissioned five papers examining current forms of interstate cooperation in the field of migration in Africa, Asia, the Americas and Europe and Central Asia and discussing trends in interstate cooperation at the global level. The papers analyse their modes of operation, review outcomes and provide an assessment of their effectiveness in facilitating interstate cooperation.

HIV and Mobile Workers: A Review of Risks and Programmes among Truckers in West Africa

2005/Softcover
48 pages
ISSN 1728-0788
English
US$ 26.00

This second volume, jointly produced by IOM and the Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS, reviews HIV-related risks and programmes for a category of worker who moves from place to place for professional reasons, truckers. It focuses on West Africa, with references to South Asia to highlight similarities when the profession is the same, but the region is different.

The document identifies the living and working conditions that put truckers at risk of HIV and other sexually transmitted infections, then gives examples of programmes aimed at promoting behaviour change among truckers, and formulates recommendations for research and for programme strategies.

The World in Motion: Short Essays on Migration and Gender

2005/Softcover
115 pages
ISBN 978-92-9068-227-2

This book looks at migration and select moments in time, past and present, through the experience of women. The feminization of migration, like the feminization of poverty, is a catchphrase. People use it in an effort to be “gender sensitive”; yet, the term itself has still to be defined and mainstreamed – much like waiting for a fuzzy Polaroid photo to develop into a precise image. You wave it around and slowly shapes begin to take on form and a clear picture appears. This is what we hope to achieve with this book. We hope to raise the visibility of the existing data and casework, to include what has been examined and interpreted by a few, and to present a snapshot of what the catchphrase “feminization of migration” means today and to what issues it may refer to in the future.

The book maps out a set of preliminary but common understandings on issues of importance to migrant women and their advocates, and further clarifies the experience of women across several key themes: labour migration, migrant remittances, trafficking, immigration and identification – all of which are key areas of migration studies.

Return Migration: Policies and Practices in Europe

2004/Softcover
402 pages
ISBN 92-9068-190-X
English
US$ 30.00

Return migration has, in recent decades, emerged as a critical element of many governments’ migration policy – an integral part of effective migration management, alongside strong border management and timely and fair asylum processes. It is seen by many as the cornerstone of any successful strategy to prevent or deter irregular migration and residence in EU states. Yet it is evident that most EU governments still struggle with how best to achieve the return of migrants in irregular situations, and are trying a range of measures to reach some specific targets.

Return is increasingly also an important issue for the recently acceded states, given their role in securing the outer borders of the EU, and the fact that all of them have become recipients, even destinations, for irregular migrants. The report covers the policies, laws and practices in return migration – both involuntary and voluntary – of the current 25 EU Member States and Norway and Switzerland.

Trafficking in Unaccompanied Minors in Ireland

2004/Softcover
55 pages
ISBN 92-9068-197-7
English
US$ 15.00

The objectives of this research were to examine the legal framework in Ireland for addressing the prosecution of perpetrators of trafficking in minors; describe the institutions and services for the protection of unaccompanied minors who are victims of trafficking and their reception into the care of public authorities, and to identify the policy responses being implemented in Ireland to combat trafficking in children and protect the victims. The study found that Ireland has a relatively modern and comprehensive legal framework in place to prosecute suspected trafficking in children and related offences in a range of circumstances. While there was evidence of extensive resources applied to trafficking investigations, this has not manifested itself in successful prosecutions.

The report recommends improving the collection of statistical data on unaccompanied minors and trafficking and providing secure legal status for these child victims for whom no asylum claim has been made as well as ending the accommodation of child trafficking victims in adult hostels or dormitory accommodation in reception centres.

Arab Migration in a Globalized World

2004/Softcover
254 pages
ISBN 92-9068-193-4
English
US$ 30.00

The Regional Conference on Arab Migration in a Globalized World brought together representatives of governments and of international organizations, as well as academics and practitioners to discuss the migration and migration-related issues in the Arab world and how they affect and are themselves affected by the particular conditions of the countries and peoples of the region.

This book was written by some of the leading experts on Arab migration and provides a wealth of information, policy analysis and data relating to migratory flows in the Arab region and neighbouring countries. It includes several papers that examine the impact of migration on development in the Arab region, and suggests ways in which countries of origin and destination might work more closely together to enhance and reap the potential benefits of migration.

Revisiting the Human Trafficking Paradigm: The Bangladesh Experience Part I: Trafficking of Adults

2004/Softcover
86 pages
ISBN 92-9068-207-8
English
US$ 25.00

Human trafficking should be seen against a wide range of trafficking acts and outcomes that involve several stages, the important ones being associated with the organization of the supply of people vulnerable to exploitation and harm; the process of movement and the demand for the service or labour of trafficked persons. To lend a comprehensive view of the trafficking in persons phenomenon, a group of development activists in Bangladesh decided to revisit the existing counter-trafficking interventions, laws, procedures and institutions. The Group's recurring informal dialogue culminated in a "Thematic Group" engaging in intensive discourses regarding the various aspects of trafficking.

This publication is the outcome of the efforts of the 30 representatives from various embassies, development partners, ministries, NGOs, research organizations and civil society, who made up the "Bangladesh Counter-Trafficking Thematic Group".

HIV/AIDS and Mobile Populations in the Caribbean: A Baseline Assessment

2004/Softcover
93 pages
ISBN 92-9068-206-X
English
Only available from www.iom.int

The report finds that it is essential to include mobile populations in the response to HIV/AIDS in the Caribbean to improve their access to HIV/AIDS prevention, care and treatment. Future interventions must also address trafficking in persons, as well as the specific needs of young women and girls.

The study also revealed the following: HIV/AIDS is a growing problem in the Caribbean, made more complex by the high level of population mobility in the region. Increased AIDS funding is creating implementation challenges; mobile populations must be an integral part of this response. HIV/AIDS testing, care and treatment services are uneven; mobile populations. Young women in particular are at risk for HIV-infection. Mandatory HIV testing needs to be addressed. High-risk behaviours together with high mobility (not high mobility alone) lead to vulnerability to HIV infection. Irregular migration, such as trafficking in persons, has been recognized as a problem which may be contributing to the HIV/AIDS epidemic in the Caribbean.

Institutionalising Diaspora Linkage: The Emigrant Bangladeshis in UK and USA

2004/Softcover

Available from IOM Dhaka

The emigrant population has certain emotional, social and cultural requirements, which they fulfil by maintaining a certain degree of relationship with their origin country. This in many cases results in strong economic, social and cultural interactions. Because of these links, Bangladesh, along with the host countries, has made significant gains from long-term emigration of a section of its population.

This study is an attempt to provide the policymakers, civil society organizations, private sector and the emigrant community with necessary information to develop policies and strategies in this regard. The study focused on two major destinations of long-term Bangladeshi immigrants, the UK and the US. Expatriate Bangladeshis (EBs) have made their mark in diverse fields in many countries. The second generation is showing great success in entering politics and the main stream media. They have also been forming different associations. More importantly, they have helped in developing a pan Bangladeshi identity in their countries of residence.

Orderly and Humane Migration: An Emerging Development Paradigm

This publication is a collection of the articles presented at the seminar on Orderly and Humane Migration: An Emerging Development Paradigm and the seminar proceedings held under the joint auspices of the Institute of Bangladesh Studies (IBS), Rajshahi University and IOM Dhaka held in 6 August 2002.

The papers presented in the seminar highlighted certain aspects of migration and human trafficking. The presenters discussed international migration and migration trends, focusing on one of the most important factors of increased migration in recent times - globalization. The papers also highlighted that as the scope for labour migration through regular channels is limited, it has been observed that smuggling and trafficking in persons is widespread. Limitations in the existing global trade regime where goods, services and capital are moving freely across borders and the movement of people is restricted along with reservations in national laws concerning labour migration are factors that play a contributing role to such a scenario.

Who is the Next Victim? Vulnerability of Young Romanian Women to Trafficking in Human Beings

2004/Softcover
72 pages
ISBN 92-9068-191-8
English
Available from
IOM Bucharest

Romania is one of the main countries of origin in south-eastern Europe for victims of trafficking, most of whom are trafficked for the purpose of sexual exploitation. The number of trafficking cases and their dynamics over the last few years speak of a reality that has already settled in. Could anybody become a victim of trafficking? Is just any woman a potential victim of trafficking? Answers to these questions can be useful to fight trafficking and to organize prevention efforts.

Knowing who the potential victims are can also assist law enforcement with the profiling of traffickers after their victims. Who are these unlucky migrants? Who are the women who end up in a trap as forced prostitutes? What makes one person more vulnerable to trafficking than another?

This paper tries to provide answers and looks at individual attributes as well as environmental factors - the family and community, since the manner by which young women grow up or the way school and family instill values and attitudes in the young are crucial for their future success or failure.

The Mental Health Aspects of Trafficking in Human Beings

2004/Softcover
183 pages
ISBN 92-9068-194-2
English

As part of the conclusion to a one-year project examining the mental health aspects of trafficking in central, east and south-east Europe, this training manual provides an overall framework to the trafficking process as well as offering innovative techniques of assessment and intervention, in an attempt to further integrate mental health and psychosocial assistance within the context of care programmes for trafficked persons.

In addition, the manual recommends basic guidelines and strategies for case management and programme implementation and reviews various assistance processes and structures currently in place, while considering both the trafficked person's as well as the provider's perspective on mental health issues associated with trafficking. In its final chapter, the manual also presents tips and coping mechanisms to counter-trafficking care personnel for the prevention of care fatigue, professional burn-out, and vicarious trauma.

Labour Migration in Asia: Trends, Challenges and Policy Responses in Countries of Origin

2003/Softcover
184 pages
ISBN 92-9068-177-2
English
US$ 35.00

Responding to chronic labour shortages in the oil rich Arab states in the 1970s and 1980s, some Asian states have been among the first to develop an active overseas employment or labour migration policy that seeks to provide protection to its nationals working abroad, relieve domestic unemployment and augment foreign exchange earnings. This volume looks at recent trends in labour migration in Asia, the issues and challenges faced by migrants and countries of origin, and policy responses by the state. The report contains articles by labour migration specialists at the ILO, IOM and the APMRN (Asia Pacific Migration Research Network) and includes a compendium of labour migration policies and practices in nine major Asian labour-sending states.

Trafficking in Persons: An Analysis of Afghanistan

2003/Softcover
89 pages
ISBN 92-9068-176-4
English
US$ 15.00

Afghanistan is confronted with a significant trafficking problem, which is deeply intertwined with the country's other problems as it emerges from decades of lawlessness. IOM has conducted a study to assess the trends and responses to trafficking in Afghanistan.

A combined approach of written survey forms, structured interviews, and a literature review have produced a substantial body of information about trafficking in Afghanistan, ranging from specific and verified cases to credible but unverified cases to information about general trends and cultural contexts. The report documents examples of many forms of trafficking. A range of "trafficking-related" trends is also documented. Though these incidents may not constitute "trafficking" as defined in the Trafficking Protocol, they still raise serious human rights concerns and share many causes and possible countermeasures with more traditional trafficking practices. Although the bulk of information on trafficking received is internal and among Afghans in neighbouring countries, there have also been cases of cross-border trafficking.

Irregular Migration and Trafficking in Women: The Case of Turkey

2003/Softcover
86 pages
ISBN 92-9068-178-0
English
US$ 25.00

This report provides a comprehensive view of the mechanisms and institutions involved in the trafficking of women in Turkey. The aim is to gain a better understanding of the issue and to propose necessary remedies and policy measures to address this phenomenon. The study examines the environment and social contexts, private and public perceptions of and attitudes towards trafficking in women, the role and attitude of intermediaries, of public officials, and the attempts to address the issue through legislative means by providing appropriate grounds for the indictment of the perpetrators and legal redress for the victims.

After the dissolution of the Former Soviet Union, the area of the current 12 CIS States became a widely used corridor for irregular migration and trafficking in human beings, both from within and outside the region. Lack of relevant legislation and needed administrative institution have continued to give traffickers and smugglers an unnecessary advantage to carry on their activities. However the CIS States have made significant headway in creating capacities and adhering to international cooperation to tackle the illegal migration in the region. A large number of international organizations, including IOM, are present in the EECA region and are involved in assisting the host governments in establishing national counter-trafficking policies, conducting preventive information campaigns, implementing research and providing assistance to victims of trafficking.

This report looks at the latest trafficking trends as they affect each of the 12 countries, and assesses the institutional and legal frameworks to combat trafficking. International cooperation is also studied and needed further action pointed out.

Migration and International Legal Norms

Migration and International Legal Norms provides a comprehensive and up-to-date analysis of the sources and scope of international law on migration. Chapters written by international experts explore norms on state authority to regulate migration, freedom of movement, forced migration, human rights, family unification, trafficking and smuggling of migrants, national security, rescue at sea, health, development, integration and nationality.

Migration and International Legal Norms shows that despite the absence of a comprehensive legal instrument governing international migration, there is a wide range of legal norms relevant to migration embodied in multilateral treaties and conventions, regional agreements, and customary international law. The volume also identifies some significant gaps in international law, recommending areas for further cooperative efforts.

Les sociétés africaines sont encore trop souvent marquées par les clivages ethniques et les comportements guerriers, dont on sait à quel point ils obèrent les chances de réussite des efforts entrepris par les politiques pour parvenir à un accord durable. La part prise par les femmes dans les situations de reconstruction et de post-conflit s'avère donc particulièrement importante, bien qu'encore insuffisamment reconnue. Elles ont de plus en plus souvent la responsabilité du foyer, devenu dans de nombreux cas monoparental, et leur fonction motrice dans le progrès social est évidente.

Il est donc essentiel de leur donner les moyens de

ISBN 92-9068-166-7
Español
US$ 32.00

El fenómeno de la inmigración en España presenta un enorme dinamismo, ampliándose en pocos años el abanico de los países de procedencia y cambiado los colectivos protagonistas en cuanto al volumen de residentes. La presente obra responde al reto que supone para los estudiosos de las migraciones abordar ese dinamismo y ello se hace con referencia a uno de los flujos que han cobrado más relevancia en España: el colectivo colombiano.

El estudio ha sido llevado a cabo mediante la colaboración de dos equipos universitarios de investigación pertenecientes a la Universidad Autónoma de Madrid y a la Universidad Pontificia Comillas y se ha contado con la colaboración de tres entidades sociales que agrupan a colombianos residentes en España: AC-ULCO, AESCO y ACOMA.

Mobile Populations and HIV/AIDS in the Southern African Region: Desk Review and Bibliography on HIV/AIDS and Mobile Populations

The research has contributed: to raise awareness regarding the policy and operational approaches of protection schemes among officials involved in combating trafficking, as well as those serving this target population; to improve the level of expertise of participants on assistance to and protection of victims of trafficking; to strengthen and extend cooperation and exchange of information on good practices; to devise and disseminate durable solutions and recommendations regarding the protection of and assistance to victims of trafficking.

This research has given further impetus to the co-operation process against trafficking in human beings in an enlarged Europe in contributing to increase the level of awareness of the participants on the European policies and actions undertaken in order to combat trafficking in human beings. Ten countries were involved in this research, both through the support provided during the preparatory and research phases and the participation in the seminar.

Elusive Protection, Uncertain Lands: Migrants' Access to Human Rights

2003/Softcover
62 pages
ISBN 92-9068-172-1
English
US$ 26.00

This study focuses on the particular vulnerability of migrants to human rights abuses, and the need to strengthen the recognition and protection of their human rights in international law and state practice. It argues that states have an ethical duty and would also be acting in their own interest in defending migrants' rights through both individual and collective action. The protection of migrants' human rights is presented as an essential interlocking element in a sustainable global system of orderly migration.

Building on the nexus between human rights protection and migration management, the study makes a strong plea for coalition building between human rights groups and migrant-serving associations.

It also explains how developments in the wake of the September 11 attacks have emphasized the importance of such coalitions.

This report recounts the efforts by Somali women to rebuild confidence and create networks across Somalia. The report is a compilation of documents presented at the seminar entitled Conflict Resolution: Confidence-building and Peace Enhancement Among Somali Women, held in Hargeisa, Somaliland, in March 2001. The seminar brought together national and international women activists to develop a programme for women's peace-building activities in the country.

The seminar briefing papers also offer an account of peace processes in South Africa, the Democratic Republic of Congo and Lebanon. The papers outline action plans for women in contributing to the peace process.

On 5 December 2001, the International Organization for Migration (IOM) celebrated 50 years of dedication to migrants, refugees and displaced persons, and countries of emigration and immigration throughout the world.

This book charts the history of the organization over the last 50 years, providing an informative overview of the international community after the Second World War, and the creation of IOM and UNHCR at the beginning of the 1950s. The book describes how the organization adjusted to the growing geographical scope and breadth of its activities, and the way the increasing volume and complexity of migratory patterns have increasingly challenged governments and societies in recent years.

This report was prepared by IOM Rome in coordination with the UNICEF Area Office for the Balkans. It provides an overview of the situation and responses to HIV/AIDS in South Eastern Europe where, in recent years political, social and economic upheavals have caused massive population displacement. Such instability exposed young people to risks especially in relation to sexual and reproductive health issues, which put them at risk and in need of targeted interventions.

Trafficking in Women and Prostitution in the Baltic States: Social and Legal Aspects

2001/Softcover
351 pages
ISBN 92-9068-117-9
English
US$ 32.00

Trafficking in human beings is a form of organized crime, particularly damaging to women trafficked for sexual exploitation. It has received increasing attention from governments, the public and the international community. Most of the countries that emerged from the Soviet legacy suffer from a lack of new opportunities in the new market economy. Women of ethnic minorities are particularly vulnerable. In the three Baltic States many women have been driven to seek to earn a living in the sex industry at home or abroad, often migrating through illegal channels.

The volume includes an extensive over-view of the relevant international and so-called “soft” law instruments (e.g. numerous resolutions, EU recommendations) relevant to trafficking in human beings.

This report is a collection of presentations from the inter-national workshop HIV/AIDS: Prevention and Care Among Mobile Groups in the Balkans, held in Rome in June 2001. The workshop focused on the intersection between mobility and vulnerability to HIV/AIDS and STIs in the south-eastern European region, and emphasizes the formation of strategies and the implementation of joint activities in an effort to curb the epidemic.

Return Migration: Journey of Hope or Despair?

Edited by Bimal Ghosh

2000/Softcover
236 pages
ISBN 92-9068-096-2
English
US$ 35.00

This collection provides a comprehensive overview on return migration with special focus on the problematic return of irregular migrants, rejected asylum seekers and temporary refugees. Starting from a retrospective of voluntary return migration and an analytical overview of current policies and programmes related to return, the book moves on to examine issues such as the protection of the human rights of returnees; the policy issues and operational challenges of countries in Central and Eastern Europe as they deal with return; and the linkages between return, reintegration and the socio-economic development of the country of origin. The final chapter addresses key issues with lines of action related to sustainable return.

Migrant Trafficking and Human Smuggling in Europe: Review of the Evidence with Case Studies from Hungary, Poland and Ukraine

2000/Softcover
416 pages
ISBN 92-9068-097-0
English
US$ 35.00

Trafficking in Migrants has become a growing global problem affecting a complex matrix of countries of origin, transit and destination, their international relations, security and economies. The book reviews literature on human trafficking and smuggling in Europe.

This review includes a discussion of the different elements involved in the analysis of trafficking and smuggling, such as the concepts, definition and international agreements and conventions dealing with human trafficking and smuggling.

The second part presents three case studies on Hungary, Poland and Ukraine and includes interviews with migrants and representative agencies for combating human trafficking and smuggling.

Temporary Labour Migration of Women: Case Studies of Bangladesh and Sri Lanka

2000/Softcover
156 pages
ISBN 92-1-127055-3
English
US$ 15.00

The last decade saw a clear trend of the feminization of labour migration in Asia. Women travel beyond the borders of their native countries to escape poverty and to improve the social and economic situation of their families. Although this empowers many women, it also makes them vulnerable as they often migrate alone.

This book contains two case studies on the impact of temporary female labour migration on the families left behind, and on women's traditional roles and status. Initiatives by governments, civil society and organizations are examined to identify gaps in policies and programmes and to recommend new measures to protect the rights of women migrants.

Illegal Migration in Lithuania: Trends, Current State and Problems

2000/Softcover
51 pages
ISSN 1238-8211
English

Available from IOM Helsinki

This report follows the earlier 1997 study on trafficking and smuggling through Lithuania. Increasing entry barriers to economically developed Western countries and difficulties in obtaining legal residence permits make would-be immigrants rely on various means of irregular and clandestine migration. The irregular transit migration through Lithuania is one of the ways to achieve their intentions.

The rise in complex migration patterns marked by economic globalization, an expanding range of source countries and unpredictable and intense migration flows, are factors which make migration management increasingly challenging.

This collection of studies, carried out within the framework of a major IOM research project, explores the issues and prospects of multilateral responses to the challenge posed by the movements of people. It also introduces the concept of an internationally harmonized migration regime, based on the principle of regulated openness, common policy objectives, harmonized normative principles and coordinated institutional arrangements.

Since the 1980s, the Central and Eastern European Countries have established new administrative and legislative systems to cope with large-scale population movements, while being affected by, and seeking to adapt to, the emerging EU border and migration regime. This co-publication with the International Centre for Migration Policy Development (ICMPD) reviews the migration trends and policy developments in 15 CEE countries in the period 1997-1998. It also looks at key migration policy issues affecting the CEE region.

IOM's second Central and Eastern European report was published in 2002, jointly with T.M.C. Asser Press.

International Migration, particularly from developing countries, has continuously grown in magnitude and complexity. The four volumes in this series are the outcome of an IOM research project carried out in the 1990s, with the support of the UN Population Fund (UNFPA), when widespread concern was being expressed about the increasing numbers of refugees, irregular migrants and asylum seekers in many parts of the world.

In order to understand the complexity and magnitude of the process, research focused on both the nature and the reality of the migration option for persons in developing countries, as well as the decision-making processes of those who did emigrate (i.e. why some persons emigrate but others in similar circumstances do not, where they go and the channels they utilize to get there). The purpose of the research was to address the root causes of migration especially as it relates to poverty; to encourage cooperation and dialogue between origin and destination countries and to facilitate the reintegration process of returning migrants.

This report describes the results of the 1998 survey conducted in 11 countries on the migration potential in Central and Eastern Europe. It gives indications of the migration potential, and of the situations that trigger emigration in the CEE region and describes various characteristics of potential migrants. It analyses which CEE countries harbour high or low migration potentials and which have a strong preference for short-term labour migration.

When there are powerful push factors in sending countries or pull factors in receiving countries, restrictive measures alone are insufficient to contain migratory flows – they are simply diverted into irregular channels. This book provides an analysis of irregular migration in its different aspects and dimensions: its nature, characteristics and magnitude, its causes, conditions and consequences and the inadequacies of existing policy measures. Against the backdrop of this analysis, the last chapter puts forward a set of specific proposals for a comprehensive strategy to combat irregular migration.

Mapping of Risk Areas of Environmentally-Induced Migration in the CIS

1998/Softcover
86 pages
ISBN 92-9068-072-5
English
US$ 20.00

This report maps out high-risk areas of environmentally-induced population displacements in the CIS. It highlights the rapid increase in the number of migrants if environmental conditions continue to deteriorate in ecologically fragile zones, and recommends preventive measures for protecting the environment, developing social infrastructure and strengthening the legal protection of ecological migrants.

Resettlement of "Refugees" and "Forced Migrants" in the Russian Federation

ISBN 92-9068-086-5
English
US$ 18.00

Based on in-depth statistical research, this study analyses the main patterns of resettlement of over 4 million migrants in the Russian Federation since the collapse of the Soviet Union. Among other issues, the report examines regional preferences of returning refugees and forced migrants and their choice between resettlement in urban or rural areas. The research concludes with a discussion of major factors influencing the process and the direction of recent migratory inflows, such as the country of origin and the ethnic background of the migrants.

Trade in services accounts for more than half of marketed world production and stands out as one of the most dynamic components in trade and foreign direct investment. The growth of the services sector both in developing and developed countries has implications for migration management.

This study highlights how trade-based issues, including the movement of persons, can be used to enhance the efficiency of the global economy from which all trading nations can gain, and how this can contribute to improve the management of migratory movements.

Deported Peoples of the Former Soviet Union: The Case of the Meskhetians

1997/Softcover
 37 pages
 ISBN 92-9068-069-5
 English
 US$ 25.00

One of the legacies of the migration policies of the former Soviet Union is the problem of the deported peoples. Deported to Siberia and Central Asia, the Meskhetians were one of the major ethnic groups affected. Based on interviews with key actors in Georgia and Azerbaijan, the report traces the history of the Meskhetians, presents a profile of their legal status and living conditions in the CIS and discusses the implications of Georgia's new policy proposals, before suggesting a number of recommendations.

International migration – people moving across borders – what are the causes, what are the effects? Who are the migrants? What makes them move; what awaits them on arrival? How does the migration experience affect their own and the lives of others? How do societies, economies and labour markets benefit from migration? IOM's flagship World Migration Report series puts these and many other questions into international perspectives and contexts that are themselves evolving continuously. It aims at a better and more comprehensive understanding of migration and the actors involved. Trends, directions, health, education, remittances, the evolving nature of migration from long-term settlement in another country to circular economic and professional migration, the role of diasporas and the linkages forged between countries of origin and destination, and expatriate and local communities, are only some of the challenging themes addressed in the series. The policy responses offered aim at propagating and harnessing the potential benefits of migration for all who are involved in this growing global phenomenon.

WORLD MIGRATION

Managing Labour Mobility in the Evolving Global Economy

World Migration 2008 focuses on the labour mobility of people in today's evolving global economy. It provides policy findings and practical options with a view to making labour migration more effective and equitable and to maximizing the benefits of labour migration for all stakeholders concerned.

The findings and options are drawn from IOM's policy and programme experience, the most recent works of leading scholars and researchers, partner international organizations, government migration policy and practice, the private sector, and civil society. The report also analyses migration flows, stocks and trends and surveys current migration developments in the major regions of the world.

Where are people migrating today and why? What are the implications for the world's developing and industrialized economies? And what are the key issues facing policymakers in migrant origin, destination, and transit countries?

World Migration 2005, IOM's flagship biennial publication, focuses on the theme of Economies of Migration: Costs and Benefits of International Migration.

Featuring contributions from the world's leading experts, it presents the latest trends in international migration, as well as regional overviews of developments in Africa, the Americas, Asia and Europe.

World Migration 2005 analyses the effects of globalization, trade liberalization, economic integration and the widening gap between rich and poor nations to migration flows.

It looks at the impact of the world's 185 million migrants and their potential contribution to socio-economic development and cultural enrichment both at home and abroad.

And it identifies the multi-dimensional migration management policies needed by governments to create the optimal return to both migrants and society, while minimizing the abuses associated with irregular migration.

Based on the comprehensive collection and interpretation of available data, IOM's second World Migration Report presents one of the most complete records of reference data and background analysis on population movements.

Published in June 2003, this report is organized around the core theme of migration management. Policy responses to specific migration issues are discussed in a series of essays with varying geographical and thematic focus.

Preceding the thematic section, a general section introduces the reader to the basics of international migration issues and provides regional updates on trends that have occurred since the publication of the previous report. Maps and graphs and a separate statistics section support the updates on migration trends and policies.

With contributions from internationally renowned practitioners and scholars in the area of migration, the report provides a critical analysis of the current state and policy implications of international migration.

International Migration is a global phenomenon involving a range of sending, destination and transit countries and a diverse range of migrants. This book, the first World Migration Report produced by IOM, provides a global account of contemporary trends, issues and problems in international migration along with some of the main challenges and opportunities now facing the international community.

The first part of the book examines the scale of migration and the characteristics of international migrants, the types of movements, the factors that contribute to migration, the global contexts in which these movements occur and the most burning policy issues currently debated.

The second part reviews migration trends, recent policy developments and key issues affecting migration in major regions of the world.

In its Migration Research Series, IOM publishes research studies on current migration trends and policy issues.

N°30 Migration, Development and Natural Disasters: Insights from the Indian Ocean Tsunami

2007
94 pages
English

When natural disasters strike populated areas, the toll in human lives, infrastructure and economic activities can be devastating and long-lasting. The psychological effects can be just as debilitating, instilling fear and discouragement in the affected populations. But, adversity also brings forth the strongest and best in human beings, and reveals initiatives, capacities and courage not perceived before. How is development undermined by natural disasters, what is the effect on migrants and migratory flows and what is the role of migration in mitigating some of the worst effects of natural calamities?

This paper explores how the advent of a natural disaster interplays with the migration-development nexus by reviewing the impact of the Indian Ocean Tsunami on migration issues in three affected countries; Indonesia, Sri Lanka, and Thailand. This paper focuses on three particular aspects of how natural disasters interplay with the migration/ development dynamic: (a) Impact of natural disasters on migrant communities, in particular heightened vulnerabilities and lack of access to humanitarian/development assistance; (b) Effect of natural disasters on migratory flows into and out-of-affected areas due to socio-economic changes which undermine pre-disaster development levels, (c) Diaspora response and support in the aftermath of disaster and the degree to which this can offset losses and bolster “re-development”.

N°29 Trafficking in Human Beings and the 2006 World Cup in Germany

2007
54 pages
English

The trafficking of women for the purpose of sexual exploitation received considerable attention prior to the 2006 World Cup in Germany. It was widely suggested that this sporting event would contribute to an increase in prostitution and a sharp increase in the number of women trafficked to Germany for sexual exploitation.

This report investigates whether there is any evidence to suggest an increase in the number of women trafficked to Germany for the purpose of sexual exploitation during the 2006 World Cup. It further examines the measures taken by the authorities and non-governmental organizations to counter trafficking in Germany during the event.

Recommendations are provided to help combat the trafficking in persons during similar major events and to provide a tool for future event organizers, policymakers and relevant authorities and NGOs.

N°28 A Study of Migrant-Sending Households in Serbia Receiving Remittances from Switzerland

2007
92 pages
English

Long-standing transnational relationships between Serbian households and their migrant relatives living in Switzerland have facilitated a large and ongoing flow of remittances and other forms of material support over the last several decades.

Recognizing the important impact that these remittance flows can have on poverty alleviation and economic development in Serbia at the household, regional and national level, the Swiss Secretariat for Economic Affairs of the Government of Switzerland (SECO) commissioned an investigation of this migration and remittances corridor. This work was carried out by IOM and two other institutional partners – the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD) and the Swiss Forum for Migration (SFM). IOM’s contribution focused on measuring the flows, transfer patterns, use and impact of remittances from Switzerland on migrant-sending households in Serbia. 343 household surveys were conducted in two rural, migrant-sending regions of Serbia with links to Switzerland, complemented by focus groups, key informant interviews and secondary literature.

The results of IOM’s research investigation is the focus of this report. Concrete recommendations on how to improve remittance services to migrants and promote their economic development impact in Serbia are also included.

Migration and Poverty Alleviation in China2007
44 pages
English

China has achieved remarkable progress in poverty alleviation since the start of the reforms. Calculated according to the official poverty line, rural poverty has dropped dramatically from 30.7 per cent in 1978 to 2.6 per cent in 2005. Rural-urban labour migration on an unprecedented scale played a vital role in rural income growth, poverty reduction and economic development in sending places, as numerous rural labourers responded to the rising income inequality by migrating to the cities. Empirical evidence shows that while the vast rural to urban migration does not significantly increase urban income poverty, labour market discrimination and social exclusion expose rural migrants to many risks and vulnerabilities in the cities, where the poor are becoming increasingly marginalized. Capacity building for the poor, the adoption of an integrated labour market system that also takes account of migrants, and the creation of a rural social security system are the three important poverty alleviation options promoted by the government. Although migration in China has unique institutional characteristics owing to the existence of the hukou system (Household Registration System), the experience of China has important lessons for our understanding of the impact of migration on development and poverty reduction.

This publication explores different challenges posed to home and host country governments engaging with their diasporas for development purposes. How to define diasporas? How to gather data on diasporas? How to incorporate diaspora contributions into development strategies? How to identify most relevant partners within the diasporas? What incentives are conducive to diaspora contributions? What resources are available within diasporas and how can their impact on development be maximized? What is the role for policy? These are some of the questions raised in this publication.

Remittances in the Great Lakes Region2006
94 pages
English

In the last several years, migrant remittances have received an increasing amount of attention from policymakers. While in the beginning the focus was on the volume and methods of remitting, gradually attention has been shifting towards using remittances as a development tool for the communities and countries of origin. However, while certain regions are very well researched and are characterized by an institutional structure that harnesses remittance-oriented policies (e.g. Mexico, the Philippines, Senegal and Morocco), others are not. The Great Lakes region (in particular the Democratic Republic of Congo or DRC, Burundi and Rwanda) belong to the latter group. Furthermore a number of factors, such as an underdeveloped financial and governmental infrastructure, the unstable political environment, the lack of available research and reliable data, hinder the implementation of policies aimed at remittances.

N° 24
Domestic Migrant Remittances in China: Distribution, Channels and Livelihoods2006
40 pages
English

Remittances are an integral feature of the internal migration process in China. According to a report released by the Consultative Group to Assist the Poor, in 2005 China's rural migrants sent nearly US$ 30 billion back home to their families. The significance of domestic remittances becomes even more evident when the large numbers of people receiving remittances are taken into account. Owing to the shorter travel distances, the lower cost of labour market entry and the larger volume of domestic migrants relative to international migrants, domestic remittances are likely to benefit more poor people than international money transfers. Clearly, in the case of China, remittances have greatly improved the incomes of rural populations.

In order to understand the contributions remittances can make to development and the ways in which potential benefits may be enhanced, there are several questions that need to be answered. For instance, how are such funds distributed within and across regions? What channels are used to send money to the rural areas? Who are the people in the rural community receiving the money? Why do some migrants fail to remit? How are remittances spent? And, what are the policy implications of how the money is distributed, remitted and used?

This report draws on a rich body of English and Chinese literature to find answers to these questions.

Migration, Human Smuggling and Trafficking from Nigeria to Europe2006
72 pages
English

Migration from Nigeria to Europe has attracted considerable attention from both governments and the media. This is partly because some elements of this migration flow are related to trafficking in persons and other criminal activities, and also because Nigerians have become prominent among sub-Saharan African asylum seekers in Europe.

There are several hundreds of thousands of Nigerians throughout Europe, half of whom live in the United Kingdom. Italy is host to the second-largest group of Nigerians and is the most important destination for trafficking in persons from Nigeria.

Although existing research and documentation on Nigerians in Europe concentrates on prostitution, trafficking and other criminal activities, the great majority of Nigerian immigrants living in Europe without any involvement in such activities are ignored.

There is growing consensus that international migration can have important impacts on development, and that it is important to develop appropriate and effective policy interventions that will help realize the full potential of international migration. This will require devising measures to harness the developmental potential that emigration from developing countries can bring while, at the same time, ensuring that the depletion of highly skilled workers does not damage development outcomes in the countries of origin. This calls for measures conducive to making remittances more effective as a means to reduce poverty and advance economic development, and to develop new and better ways with which to facilitate the involvement of diaspora communities in the development of their home countries. These are tasks facing migration and development policymakers at all levels and in every country of the world.

This paper is intended to guide policymakers through some of these challenges. It is intended to be an accessible guide to the policy implications drawn from the burgeoning literature on migration and development. Its primary aim is to further the important and timely process of mapping out the policy options in this area, especially across the spectrum of channels that form the migration-development nexus.

Migration and Development: New Strategic Outlooks and Practical Ways Forward: The Cases of Angola and Zambia

2005
 100 pages
 English

This study is a follow-up activity to the MIDSA Workshop on Migration and Development in Southern Africa, held in Zanzibar, Tanzania, in 2004. It assesses and analyses the migration and development situation of Angola and Zambia, with a special focus on skills migration and a review of government policies and capacity related to skills migration and initiatives of various stakeholders, including donors and civil society organizations.

There is much greater awareness today that development affects migration, and that migration influences development. The challenge is to find innovative and effective ways to enhance the benefits of migration while mitigating its adverse development implications for emigration countries. For this purpose, it is important to distinguish between different groups of migrants based on their skill levels.

Governments of emigration countries look with considerable concern on the permanent departure of highly educated and trained nationals. Such skills emigration can translate into both negative and positive effects: on the one hand brain drain and, on the other, positive consequences such as the development of emigration countries aided by circular or permanent return of their skilled expatriates.

The Millennium Development Goals and Migration

2005
 44 pages
 English

This paper discusses the linkages between migration and the Millennium Development Goals, with specific focus on poverty alleviation, gender, health, environmental sustainability and global partnerships. There is a noticeable gap in research and analysis on how migration is linked to attaining the Millennium Development Goals. However as the available evidence shows, there is clearly no simple cause and effect relationship between migration and the achievement of the MDGs.

The report argues that while the impact of migration on development can be both positive and negative, if properly engaged, migrants can be a supporting factor towards the achievement of MDG targets. In those areas where migration can be identified as a challenge to achieving the MDGs, the international community needs to develop migration management strategies in order to address the negative effect of migration on attaining the goals. Simultaneously, governments, development agencies and international organizations should develop strategies to enhance the positive impact of migration on the achievement of the MDGs.

Above all, the complex relationship between migration and the MDGs must be explored further. Further research is needed to develop meaningful indicators in order to assist governments to develop appropriate policy mechanisms to take advantage of the positive potential of migration on achieving the MDGs.

Internal Migration and Development: A Global Perspective

2005
 80 pages
 English

This paper discusses internal voluntary migration for paid work. It includes both permanent and temporary migration as well as rural-rural, rural-urban, urban-rural and urban-urban migration.

The report argues that internal migration can play an important role in poverty reduction and economic development; internal migration should therefore not be controlled or actively discouraged. Policy should instead concern itself with ways of maximizing the potential benefits of migration to the individual and society at large. While there have been few formal efforts to estimate the economic contribution of migrant labour, it is evident that many developing countries would probably not have had the roads, buildings, manufacturing and trade centres that they have today had it not been for migration. By not acknowledging the vast role played by migrant labour in driving agricultural and industrial growth, governments escape the responsibility of providing basic services to millions of poor people who are currently bearing the costs of moving labour to locations where it is needed most.

Dynamics of Remittance Utilization in Bangladesh

2005
 96 pages
 English

Every year some 200,000 or more Bangladeshis leave the country officially to work elsewhere. Add to this the more than 1 million Bangladeshis living permanently outside the country and the extent of emigration becomes apparent.

Most of these migrants send part of their earnings home on a regular or irregular basis. Together this amounted to more than US$ 2 billion annually between 2000 and 2002 and even 3 billion in 2003.

This report attempts to answer the following three research questions: What is the impact of remittances on households and the broader community in Bangladesh?; What are the initiatives taken by the government or other actors to enhance the impact of remittances?; What are the major hindrances, opportunities and possible avenues for the enhancement of the impact of remittances on society as a whole?

The Development Potential of Zimbabweans in the Diaspora: A Survey of Zimbabweans Living in the UK and South Africa

2005
 96 pages
 English

This report draws on findings from a survey of 1,000 Zimbabweans living in the United Kingdom and South Africa. It examines the education and employment skills base of respondents on arrival in either the UK or South Africa and their educational qualifications and employment at the time of the survey. Transnational activities are explored, including the sending of economic and other remittances. There is a great deal of interest in participating in skills exchanges to Zimbabwe and/or to contributing to development-related activities.

This report finds strong linkages with Zimbabwe and other Zimbabweans in the diaspora and an interest in return migration.

Migration from Latin America to Europe: Trends and Policy Challenges

2004
 74 pages
 English

Migration to Europe from Latin America and the Caribbean (LAC) has grown rapidly over the last decade. Most of the flows are directed towards southern European countries, although other European countries have also seen significant increases. Widespread poverty and economic hardship caused by the recession in LAC, together with the tightening of visa regimes in the United States following September 11, 2001, have been a major contributing cause of increased flows. The most recent data in major destination countries, such as Spain, show that the largest increases occurred over the past two to three years. The existence of what is now a significant LAC diaspora in Europe may itself be a driving force for further migration, and flows are likely to continue increasing in the future. The demographic profile of LAC migrants in Europe shows a young population with high rates of labour force participation, relatively high levels of education and strong remitting behaviour.

Is Trafficking in Human Beings Demand Driven? A Multi-country Pilot Study

2003
 52 pages
 English

This pilot research stems from the ASEM Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children (2001), that has stressed the need to encourage research on the demand for the most common forms of exploitation of trafficked women and children. The multi-country study assessed attitudes of employers of domestic workers in Sweden, Thailand, India and Italy and clients of sex workers in Denmark, Thailand, India and Italy. The report suggests that three related factors are key to explaining the exploitative conditions experienced by many migrant domestic and sex workers: (a) The unregulated nature of the labour market segments in which they work; (b) the abundant supply of exploitable labour and (c) the power and malleability of social norms regulating the behaviour of employers and clients. The continued expansion of any unregulated market is likely to require and facilitate the exploitation of vulnerable labour. Both paid sex and domestic work are peculiar market segments in the sense that there is both political and social unease regarding those who buy and sell in them as workers or consumers/employers. In both sex and domestic work, the absence of effective regulation is one of the factors that help to create an environment in which it is possible and profitable to use unfree labour.

Migration and Development: A Perspective from Asia

2003
 42 pages
 English

The study makes a contribution to the newly emerged debate on migration and development. The paper is divided into three sections: The first focuses on the financial flows associated with international migration. The second section is concerned with diasporas and how these can be mobilized to the extent that they benefit the communities of origin. The final part draws a number of conclusions on the impact of migration on poverty. In the first part, Graeme Hugo goes through research findings asking if remittances have any serious impact on redistribution of wealth from North to South, examining the effects at aggregate, regional and community levels as well as on household welfare. He also points out that in some cases the share of money transfers sent through official channels is strikingly low, as according to estimates, in Pakistan only US$ 1 billion, out of a total of US$ 8-10 billion would be remitted through official channels. Hugo goes on showing how recent research proves that the consequences of the outflow of human capital for less-developed countries are not always negative but more complex. This paper shows how several Asian countries have been able to mobilize their diasporas to benefit development in the countries of origin.

 Irregular Migration in North America and Europe

2003
 108 pages
 English

This volume reviews the cost-effectiveness of both external and internal migration-control instruments in selected countries – the US, Canada, Germany, the Netherlands and the UK. Arguing that if countries targeted by irregular migration flows were to foster trade, investment and aid in the countries of origin, migration pressures could be expected to gradually decline, the author recognizes that there are no easy ways to narrow the gap between migration management objectives and the actual results achieved.

The author concludes that the key to success posits the setting of realistic goals, coordinated migration management within and across countries and the continuing monitoring and revision of appropriate policy instruments.

The growing importance of illegal transit migration through Turkey, together with the use of Turkey's territory as a staging post for onward migration towards the West, pose a major challenge for the Turkish government as it seeks to control and manage such movements, which are often organized by international criminal smuggling and trafficking networks.

This report is based on interviews with migrants, migration officials as well as traffickers and provides useful insights into the origins and motivations of transit migrants and their intentions for further migration.

The report also discusses Turkey's policies and efforts aimed at managing the substantial irregular migration flows through its territory in cooperation with western European countries – the main destinations of transit migration through Turkey.

Trafficking in women is caused by factors related to the economic collapse: unemployment, a drop in the social status of women and the increasing number of transnational organized criminal groups involved in prostitution and trafficking.

The changes in living standards, the psychological and attitudinal changes in people and the quest for a Western utopia have caused many women to grasp at ways to migrate to destinations where, in fact, women and girls are trafficked for sexual exploitation.

Myths and Realities of Chinese Irregular Migration

English

Irregular migration of Chinese migrants has become the focus of much attention. To assess the real significance of irregular movements from China, this report reviews recent research and common myths and generalizations about Chinese irregular migration, and discusses policy measures that have been taken by China and other countries to combat trafficking and smuggling of people from China.

The report argues for a more balanced view of irregular migration and of the specific role played by migrants from China.

On the occasion of the 50th anniversary of the International Organization for Migration in November 2001, IOM's governing Council launched a process of International Dialogue on Migration, with the goal of increasing understanding of migration and enhancing cooperation in its management. This series captures the results of the dialogue at each relevant Council session, while additional issues are produced to facilitate the Council dialogue.

N°9 – Migration and Human Resources for Health: From Awareness to Action

2007

147 pages

English, Français, Español

The seminar on Migration and Human Resources for Health: From Awareness to Action, held in Geneva on 23-24 March 2006, was organized within the framework of IOM's International Dialogue on Migration in collaboration with the World Health Organization and the International Labour Organization and with the co-sponsorship of the Government of Ireland. The seminar was organized in recognition of the need to gain a deeper understanding of the complex issues and dynamics involved in international migration of health professionals and to move towards a more comprehensive and inclusive approach to human resource management in this sector. The main objectives of the seminar were to bring together a broad range of stakeholders to work together towards effective management of the mobility of health care workers, to review existing policy approaches and discuss innovative strategies to managing the mobility of health professionals and to identify action points to carry the agenda forward.

The seminar brought together government officials from the health, labour and migration sectors, representatives of intergovernmental organizations, NGOs, the private sector and civil society for an open and informal exchange of views on key issues, opportunities and challenges relating to migration and human resources for health. The seminar had particular focus on highlighting the perspectives of non-governmental actors, such as the business sector, diaspora groups, individual migrants, professional organizations and many others, as these stakeholders have important roles to play in issues relating to the mobility of health professionals and need to be actively engaged in the policy dialogue and programming.

This publication includes the materials of the two-day seminar on Migration and Human Resources for Health. It covers a broad range of issues associated with the mobility of health care workers, including the current trends in the migration of health professionals, key challenges in the area of human resources for health and practical approaches to addressing these challenges, including proposals for how the various stakeholders can carry the agenda forward from awareness to action.

279 pages

English, Français, Español

The Workshop on Migration and Development, held in Geneva on 2-3 February 2005, was organized in cooperation with the UK Department for International Development (DFID) and the Netherlands Ministry of Foreign Affairs. The main objectives of the workshop were to examine why migration should be considered a development issue, to look at the synergies between migration and development agendas, and to examine how migration could be mainstreamed into development policy agendas, focusing on MDGs, partnerships and engaging diasporas. The meeting provided governments, intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations with a forum for in-depth discussions to share experiences on approaches and practices that incorporated migration issues into national, regional and international development policy agendas in both developing and developed countries, and to identify areas where such activities could be taken further.

This publication covers a broad range of issues arising from the intersection of migration and development which were discussed during the workshop, including the MDGs, remittances, the role of diasporas, brain drain and brain circulation, labour migration and return and reintegration. In addition, the publication includes the analysis of the survey on "Engaging Diasporas as Agents for Development", which aims to inform governments willing to engage with diasporas for development about existing policies, obstacles and successes encountered.

154 pages

English, Français, Español

The seminar on Trade and Migration, held in Geneva in October 2004, was co-sponsored by IOM, the World Bank and the World Trade Organization. This event was a follow up to the November 2003 Trade and Migration seminar organized by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, IOM and the World Bank. The 2004 seminar brought together trade and migration officials from 89 countries and numerous international organizations in addition to representatives of business and civil society.

The primary objective of the event was to continue the dialogue between trade and migration stakeholders and further explore the intersection of the trade and migration worlds through consideration of the actual, practical experiences of governments in managing the temporary movement of persons.

The focus of the seminar was the examination of the existing unilateral, bilateral and regional schemes for managing the movement and temporary stay of foreign workers to determine what can be learned from these schemes that is of relevance to GATS Mode 4.

This publication covers a broad range of issues within the trade and migration nexus which were discussed during the seminar, including policy, legislative and implementation challenges in managing the movement and temporary stay of labour migrants, perspectives of employer and union representatives on the issues of concern for these constituent groups, as well as the implications for Mode 4 of what has been learned over the course of the seminar.

The Seminar on Health and Migration was initiated in recognition of the need to assess the public health implications of increasingly mobile populations, and to integrate health policies into migration management strategies. This seminar was held in Geneva in June 2004 with the co-sponsorship of the World Health Organization and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. It brought together health and migration officials from around the globe to exchange views on migration health policy concerns, perspectives and experiences.

This publication details the broad range of issues discussed during the seminar. Panels of experts encouraged debate on topics such as the use of pre-departure health assessments, the need to address the mental health of migrants, healthcare access for irregular migrants, and the migration of healthcare workers. The records of the discussions set out the main challenges and areas for policy reform., such as the need for programme support, local capacity building, information sharing and communication of best practices.

Only available in CD and on www.iom.int

Significant International Statements: A Thematic Compilation is a collection of statements emanating from selected migration-related regional, inter-regional and international conferences. It is intended as a reference tool for migration practitioners, policymakers and IOM staff when looking at migration issues of interest to the international community. This publication is the fifth in the International Dialogue on Migration.

The international statements on migration are presented as follows: (1) thematically in the form of quotations, and (2) the full text of the selected conferences. The aim of the first section is to identify migration areas of common interest and understanding, and areas where the views of different national or regional experiences and perspectives diverge. The second section provides the user with the full final text adopted at the conferences concerned.

Volume 4 was developed in response to questions and issues discussed at the plenary session and in the workshops for policymakers at the International Dialogue on Migration of the 84th session of the IOM Council. Its purpose is to provide a more detailed review of the challenges policymakers throughout the world encounter when developing comprehensive approaches to migration management particularly with respect to (1) Integration, (2) Irregular Migration, and (3) Diaspora Support to Migration and Development. These policy papers are not intended to offer any ready-made responses. Instead, they seek to inspire and promote further discussion among the member and observer states of IOM, and among intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations.

The anniversary session of the Council of IOM offered an opportunity for the international community to reflect on 50 years of migration management and to prepare for the new challenges posed by migration at the start of the twenty-first century.

This document reproduces the texts of keynote statements delivered by ministers from several IOM member states. It also contains the substance of the discussions by a panel of international experts concerning the future challenges associated with migration.

The International Migration Law (IML) Series seeks to promote the understanding and awareness of the legal norms and principles that govern the movement of persons today, with regard to both rights and obligations of migrants and States' responsibilities. It provides in one source definitions for terms used in the migration domain, and offers thematic analysis of specific migration law issues. The IML Series is coordinated by IOM's International Migration Law and Legal Affairs Department.

Part 1 describes the type of biometric applications available, those used in migration management, and how biometric systems function. Part 2 examines the potential biometrics provide for greater security in migration management and focuses on developments in the use of biometrics as a result of September 11. Part 3 discusses the impact of the use of biometrics in the management of migration on the individual's right to privacy and ability to move freely and lawfully. The paper highlights the increasing need for domestic, and international, frameworks to govern the use of biometric applications in the migration/security context, and proposes a number of issues that such frameworks could address.

En el marco de sus actividades de capacitación y fortalecimiento institucional relativas al Derecho Internacional sobre Migración, la OIM organizó en febrero y marzo de 2004 unos cursos de capacitación y formación de instructores en Managua y en Bogotá. Dichos cursos se centraron en la promoción y en el respeto de los derechos humanos de todas las personas concernidas por la migración, y sirvieron para pasar revista a los distintos regímenes jurídicos y mecanismos de protección que rigen, actualmente, la circulación de las personas.

Este volumen contiene la información proporcionada durante esos cursos así como un análisis de las distintas fuentes de derechos humanos aplicables a los migrantes; además, ofrece información adicional sobre situaciones migratorias concretas: migración interna, desplazados internos, conflictos armados internos y migración laboral. Asimismo, trata de la protección de los refugiados y del régimen de asilo en el marco del sistema internacional de protección de derechos humanos.

La finalidad de esta publicación es promover y facilitar la comprensión de los derechos humanos de los migrantes. Con ese fin, la OIM ha compilado y analizado las normas, fuentes y mecanismos de protección más destacados, porque las normas jurídicas aplicables a la protección de los migrantes se hallan dispersas en las diversas ramas del derecho, a saber, el derecho internacional sobre refugiados, el derecho humanitario y los derechos humanos.

Cet ouvrage contient les contributions présentées par divers juristes lors du Colloque "Migrations et protection des droits de l'homme", organisé par l'OIM à Dakar, Sénégal, en octobre 2004. Il montre le spectre de tous les droits des personnes impliquées dans la migration, quelle que soit la cause du mouvement ou la qualification donnée à ces personnes au cours de leur pérégrination, du pays d'origine au pays de transit vers le pays de destination.

Une gestion ordonnée et humaine des migrations est aujourd'hui considérée comme une condition préalable du bénéfice qui peuvent en tirer les sociétés des pays concernés comme les migrants eux-mêmes. Les Etats ont la responsabilité de protéger les droits des migrants et de leurs nationaux et de prendre en considération les intérêts des uns et des autres dans les paramètres définis par les normes et les principes internationaux, auxquels il est globalement fait référence sous l'expression "droit international de la migration". Deux principes fondamentaux sont à concilier : la souveraineté nationale et la protection des droits des migrants.

Il existe bon nombre de conventions aux niveaux mondial et régional concernant les droits des personnes impliquées dans la migration, mais ces instruments sont dispersés dans différentes branches du droit (droits de l'homme, droit humanitaire, droit des travailleurs migrants, droit des réfugiés). Cet ouvrage se concentre sur l'examen des normes d'application générale relatives à la protection des migrants, c'est-à-dire les traités internationaux, la coutume internationale et les principes généraux du droit ainsi que les conventions de caractère régional, et donne un aperçu intégral des divers régimes juridiques et mécanismes de contrôle applicables.

Migration is increasingly being acknowledged as an issue that needs a global approach and coordinated responses. States are not only discussing migration issues at the bilateral level, but also regionally and lately in global arenas. A commonly understood language is indispensable for such coordination and international cooperation to be successful. This glossary attempts to serve as a guide to the mire of terms and concepts in the migration field, in an effort to provide a useful tool to the furtherance of such international cooperation and the common understanding of migration issues.

International Migration journal is a peer-reviewed academic journal on current migration issues, sponsored by IOM and edited by Georgetown University. The journal is interdisciplinary in scope, seeking broad geographical coverage of international migration throughout the world with emphasis on a discussion and analysis of contemporary policy and practices by governments and elements of civil society that shape the determinants and consequences of international migration.

International Migration Vol. 45(4)

This issue contains the following articles:

Unauthorized Migration from Africa to Spain

This article examines the patterns and dynamics of transit migration towards the Spanish-African borders, and of unauthorized migration across these borders. The geography of migration is examined in detail, and leading to several conclusions with implications for migration management.

Morocco's Migration Experience: A Transitional Perspective

This paper interprets the evolution of migration within, from, and to Morocco over the twentieth century, using a "transitional" perspective on migration which combines three theoretical approaches on dynamic development-migration linkages. Colonization, the incorporation of rural areas, and attainment of a certain level of economic development, have spurred wage labour migration internally, within Morocco, and internationally, from Morocco to Europe.

The Role of Emigration and International Cooperation in Development: The Case of Morocco and its Relations with Spain

This article analyses the relationships between emigration and Official Development Aid (ODA) policies, taking the cases of Spain and Morocco as the backdrop to the study. It discusses the principal characteristics of both the Spanish state and non-governmental cooperation in Morocco, the underlying motivations of the principal stakeholders, and the way international cooperation policies now encompass the phenomenon of emigration.

Migration and Human Rights on the Mexico-Guatemala Border

This paper identifies the protections in place for irregular migrants on the Mexico-Guatemala border and analyzes Mexican government immigration enforcement policies and levels of compliance with international standards and national law. The paper also explores the history of the Mexico-Guatemala border region, different types of migration flows into and through the area, and the linkages between migration, trade, security, and US immigration policy.

The Right to Return in China

This paper argues that a more open policy is not only consistent with international human rights norms, but also a useful infrastructure for the country's place in the global economy. A careful, well-defined, and well-coordinated right to return strategy, that balances the Western experience and Chinese reality, could enhance China's economic progress as well as its international human rights image.

What Makes and Entrepreneur and Does it Pay? Native Men, Turks, and Other Migrants in Germany

This paper focuses on the entrepreneurial endeavours of immigrants and natives in Germany, focusing on Turks, Germany's largest immigrant group and one under-studied in the literature.

Health Status of Temporary Migrants in Urban Areas in Vietnam

This paper compares issues of health status and its determinants as they affect temporary urban migrants versus permanent urban migrants and non-migrants.

Temporary Skilled Migration to Australia: Employers' Perspectives

This paper examines employers' reasons for sponsoring skilled workers from abroad, their modes of recruitment, the occupational skills they require, and their industry profile. We also discuss issues relating to the perception of a shortage of skilled workers, the extent that sponsoring foreign workers substitutes for investing in local training, and the role of networks in recruiting overseas workers.

Immigrant Participation in Decision-making Processes at the Local Level: A Comparison of Immigrants and Veterans in Israel

This article utilizes qualitative research to examine a variety of different characteristics of immigrant participation in policymaking and planning in Israel. In particular, the research targets immigrant leaders from the Commonwealth of Independent States (specifically, Russia, the Ukraine, and Belarus) and Ethiopia, and investigates participation aspects such as common tactics and level of influence.

Brain Drain Potential in Botswana

This paper examines the prospect of emigration of skilled professional citizens from Botswana. This study was designed primarily to determine whether professionals persist in their intention to leave the country and, if so, why they want to migrate.

International Migration Vol. 45(3)

This issue contains the following articles:

Toward a Critical Phenomenology of "Illegality": State Power, Criminalization, and Embodied Experience among Undocumented Migrant Workers in Tel Aviv, Israel

This article contends that phenomenologically engaged ethnography has a crucial role to play in sensitizing not only anthropologists, but also policymakers, politicians, and broader publics to the complicated, often anxiety-ridden and frightening realities associated with "the condition of migrant illegality," both in the context of specific host societies and comparatively across the globe.

"Oaxacans Like to Work Bent Over:" The Naturalization of Social Suffering among Berry Farm Workers

This article utilizes over 15 months of full-time, participant-observation fieldwork with undocumented Triqui migrant labourers from the Mexican state of Oaxaca to analyze social suffering and symbolic violence on a berry farm in Washington State. Broadly, this article explores the ethnic, citizenship, and suffering hierarchies in the US agriculture industry as well as the processes by which these inequalities are normalized and naturalized.

"Everyone With Eyes Can See The Problem": Moral Citizens and the Space of Irish Nationhood

This article examines a 2004 Constitutional Amendment in Ireland which removes birthright citizenship from any future children born in Ireland to immigrant parents. It argues that the ability of the state to convince its citizens of the necessity for this Amendment was remarkable for particular historical reasons, and suggests that the state was able to do so by constructing citizenship as a moral regime and foreign-nationals and their fetuses as 'suspect patriots.'

The Emergence of Pro-Regularisation Movements in Western Europe

This article starts from the assumption that despite important differences, France, Spain, and former Yugoslavia share several central characteristics which enabled the emergence of pro-regularisation movements since the mid-1990s. In order to identify these preconditions, three country studies were carried out based on an innovative social movement research approach.

Battling for Survival, Battling for Moral Clarity: "Illegality" and Illness in Everyday Struggles of Undocumented HIV-Positive Women Migrant Workers in Tel Aviv

The present article draws upon ethnographic field research conducted among undocumented HIV-positive migrant women in Tel Aviv to explore some of the stakes, mechanisms, and outcomes of these complicated, high pressure negotiation processes.

Irregular Workers or Ethnic Kin? Post-Nineties Labour Migration from Bulgaria to Turkey

This article addresses the overall lack of attention given to the post-1990s irregular migration flows from Bulgaria to Turkey despite the increasingly significant number of such migrants.

International Migration Vol. 45(2)

This issue contains the following articles:

Path Dependency and Path Creation Perspectives on Migration Trajectories: The Economic Experiences of Vietnamese Migrants in Slovakia

There has been only limited research on the Vietnamese diaspora, and that has mostly focussed on Western market economies. This paper explores the distinctive migration, dictated by Cold War geopolitics, from Viet Nam to the Eastern block countries. It examines how the intersection of migration policies and politico-economic conditions, before and after the end of state socialism in 1989, produced two distinctive migration phases.

"Where are they going?": Immigrants' Inclusions in the Czech Republic (A Case Study on Ukrainians, Vietnamese and Armenians in Prague)

This paper is based on research conducted by IOM Prague and the Faculty of Science, Charles University in Prague in the fall and winter of 2003-2004. The main goals of the research were to ascertain what mode of inclusion into Czech society the immigrant groups practiced and to determine their satisfaction level with their new lives.

Social and Academic Adaptation Styles of Female Students Who Immigrated Alone from the Former Soviet Union to Israel

Migration from the Former Soviet Union (FSU) included a unique group of young women who immigrated alone to Israel in search of opportunities for higher education. Individual migration is a rare phenomenon in the Jewish-Russian family context, which is characterized by close family ties among members. The lessons learned from the idiosyncratic experiences of participants in this phenomenological study provide valuable insights into issues arising in the course of the inter-cultural transition of this understudied migrant population and suggest directions for further research.

The Rise and Fall of Temporary Foreign Worker Policies: Lessons from Poland

This essay reflects upon post-World War II and post-Cold War admissions of low-skilled temporary foreign workers to North America and Europe. The author's hope is that lessons from history can help Polish (and other new European Union immigration states) develop well-informed labour migration policy.

International Migration Vol. 45(1)

This issue contains the following articles:

Psychological Wellness and Distress Among Recent Immigrants: A Four-Year Longitudinal Study of Immigrants from the Former Soviet Union to Israel and Germany

Findings regarding immigrants' psychological wellness and distress are contradictory. Some studies find elevated levels of distress among immigrants, others failed to demonstrate such reactions. The study involves families (parents and adolescents) from the former Soviet Union who immigrated to Israel and to Germany. The respondents were assessed with the Brief Symptom Inventory (BSI) at three time intervals.

Strengthening Social Capital Through Bilingual Competence in a Transnational Migrant Community: Mexicans in Upstate New York

This paper examines the interplay of language and social networks in a recently formed Mexican migrant community in upstate New York. Despite the challenges Mexican migrants face in obtaining fluent Spanish-English bilingualism, some degree of bilingual competence is well within their reach.

Integration into the Australian Labour Market: The Experience of Three "Visibly Different" Groups of Recently Arrived Refugees

This paper explores the effects of "visible difference" on employment outcomes of three recently arrived refugee groups: ex-Yugoslavs, black Africans, and people from the Middle East. The paper draws on data collected through a survey of refugees who settled in Western Australia over the past decade.

Local Hybridity Among Absorbing Institutions

This paper discusses the encounter between the hegemony (the national absorbing institutions) and the "other" (the Yemenite immigrants) in the cooperative agricultural village of Ravid in Palestine before the founding of the State of Israel. The research indicates the ambivalence of the cultural field in which the absorbing and the absorbed meet, and the influence of this encounter on the absorbing themselves, in a local territory.

Psychosocial Notebooks

The Psychosocial Notebooks form a series of journals that document both research and practical experiences of rehabilitation and therapeutic assistance to traumatized and displaced individuals following armed conflicts, especially in Kosovo. These publications were launched as a result of the increasing recognition of the importance of psychosocial health in emergencies, and the need to develop appropriate strategies to recognize and manage these issues.

Psychosocial Support to Groups of Victims of Human Trafficking in Transit Situations

2004/Softcover
115 pages
ISSN 1680-1970
English
US$ 25.00

The psychosocial assistance provided to victims of trafficking in a transit centre has to deal with the trauma provoked by past experiences and the expectations for life in the future and its accompanying problems. Helping the women to bridge the gap between their perceptions of the future with the realities they face is one of the primary aims of the assistance provided in the transit centre, as important as the first re-elaboration of the traumatic experiences they faced in the past. The present, which is usually the centre of psychosocial work, plays a very different therapeutic role in this setting. The overall assistance programme provided to trafficked victims focuses primarily on their psychosocial rehabilitation.

Psychosocial and Trauma Response in War-torn Societies: Supporting Traumatized Communities through Theatre and the Arts

2002/Softcover
104 pages
ISSN 1680-1970
English
US$ 25.00
Distributed with a video, "The Exiled Body"

Building on the results of the PTR programme launched in 1999, this issue analyses the role played by artistic and theatrical activities in supporting and helping traumatized communities, as painful past experiences can be recounted by individuals and groups using metaphors, symbols and body language. The collection of essays points out the innovative multi-disciplinary approach adopted by the programme, which brings together the elements of mental health, oral history, anthropology and arts in overcoming collective suffering linked to the socio-cultural context where traumatic experiences have first been lived through.

Archives of Memory: Supporting Traumatized Communities through Narration and Remembrance

2001/Softcover
226 pages
ISSN 1680-1970
English
US$ 25.00

The Archives of Memory were conceived as a part of the Psychosocial and Trauma Response Programme for the Displaced Persons and Refugees in Kosovo (PTR). It is devoted to both the preservation and dissemination of the various materials documenting the experiences of the Kosovar people. In the experiences documented in this issue of the Notebook, history stands out as the important component of a more complex interdisciplinary intervention, one where the principal goal was, and still is, the support for the psychological recovery of a community. This issue on Archives of Memory, with its contributions from historians and anthropologists, exemplifies and bears witness to the role that history plays in psychological recovery.

Psychosocial and Trauma Response in War-torn Societies: The Case of Kosovo

2001/Softcover
132 pages
ISBN 92-9068-101-2
English, Albanian
US$ 25.00

The Psychosocial and Trauma Response Programme for Displaced Persons and Refugees from Kosovo (PTR) was initiated in the refugee camps in Albania after the outbreak of violence in April 1999. Following the massive, spontaneous return of the refugees upon the resolution of the conflict, the project's focus shifted to Kosovo to determine how best to respond to the returnees' psychosocial needs, while laying the ground for long-term capacity building of the local educational infrastructure.

This notebook contains a selection of papers from the first International Seminar on Psychosocial and Trauma Response in Kosovo, held in Geneva in March 2000.

Migration offers a variety of articles presenting IOM's current activities in the field of migration and other related topics which are implemented in various regions of the globe.

Published twice a year, Migration is an update on the Organization's activities and international migration policy issues. Migration is available in English, French and Spanish.

Migration Initiatives 2007

2007/Softcover
113 pages
English

Migration is increasingly recognized as a key global phenomenon with significant local impact. Its multi-faceted and cross-cutting nature requires it to be analyzed and addressed with due regard to related policy spheres such as development, trade, human rights, disaster response, health and the environment, among others, at the national, regional and global levels.

While IOM is the only inter-governmental organization with a mandate exclusively focused on migration, it works systematically with governmental, intergovernmental and non-governmental partners in carrying out a full range of migration services which assist in meeting the operational challenges of migration management.

This issue of Migration Initiatives provides an overview of IOM's wide thematic as well as geographic range of work. Some migration issues are of an ongoing nature, while others, specifically those related to disaster and conflict, are less predictable. The diversity of projects illustrated in this document is a reflection of the variety of challenges posed by migration. IOM's decentralized structure of country offices, missions with regional functions and special liaison missions is specifically designed to respond to the multitude of different migration needs on the ground. It is through the combination of international and local expertise that IOM strives to address each project effectively.

Thousands of African nationals leave their home country each year to pursue better economic prospects within or outside Africa, depriving the continent of its vital human resources. Despite this enormous loss, the African diaspora, equipped with their competencies, new ideas and expertise gained abroad, are a tremendous asset to the development of their countries of origin as well as to their host country.

CH-1211 Geneva 19,
Switzerland
or online at www.iom.int

The report covers the 2006 activities of the IOM Migration Health Department (MHD). MHD promotes migrants' right to health and advises partners and governments on migration health management. Beneficiaries include a wide variety of migrants, including internally displaced, refugees, returnees, trafficked, irregular migrants and labour migrants.

Activities encompass a range of health-related services in accordance with the challenges facing mobile populations today, and show the continued commitment by IOM member states and donors regarding the management and operational assistance to address such challenges.
